

Traveling Encounters

- Charming Bridge. A jolly cobbler named Sandals appears on the road. He boasts, “Hopkirks buying up my shoes faster than I can cobble ‘em together!” He hears music inside, but he’s never been let in. “Come to think of it, nobody comes out...” He knows a bit about the village layout.
- Festive Fields. Birds decorate scarecrows with flowers, cawing away in seeming celebration. If a hero can speak to animals: “Happy Couple!”, “Emerald Bride!”. If disturbed, they fly off to the Manor on Hopkirk’s hill.
- Wedding Fever. Two bandits are caught plundering an abandoned carriage. They appear too lovestruck to fight, gladly handing over pilfered riches as one proposes to the other. DC 16 Insight Check: Their excitement borders on desperation.

Hollow Hamlet. Outside the village palisades, empty farmsteads. Doors hang open, carts litter the street.

- A raised drawbridge blocks entrance into Hopkirk. Music and cheering echoes beyond.
- Hamlet is seemingly abandoned. Wedding invites scattered about, stuffed under doors.
- Farm animals roam free, collecting decorations for their pens, trailing ribbons. DC 12 Perception: Jewelry among the detritus (50gp)!
- Drawbridge. There is an emerald green letterbox on it that says: “Invited guests only!” and opens its “mouth” (Lowers once an invitation is offered, though heroes could instead scale the walls or come up with any other creative solution!)

Dearest friends and neighbors of Hopkirk,

You are most cordially invited to the union of Merrin and Drayna! Come share in song, feast, and merriment, for the celebration shall last until every heart is full, every voice is hoarse, and every soul is overflowing with happiness.

– May their joy never end!

The In-Laws

Runic Protection. Both have Heavy armor until the couple is freed.

Legendary Duo. Either one acts after each Hero.

Auntie Fae

100

Stop Hitting Yourself! (Reaction, 1/Round)
Swap the position of two creatures within Reach 4.

Tricksy Magic. Move 8, then (Range 6) 1d4+10 psychic damage (ignores armor).

Uncle Fae

M

100

Clobber. Move 6, then attack for 1d4+20 damage. On hit: Grappled (escape DC 12).

Faeries

Spritely Evasion: Attacks against Faeries are rolled with disadvantage and miss on 2 or less.

FAERIE LVL 2, TINY 20 FLY

Tricksy Magic. (Range 6) 1d4+10 psychic damage (ignores armor).

FAERIE 38 FLY

MERRYMAKER LVL 4, TINY

Prank Bomb. (Range 4) 2d4+10. On hit, choose 1 effect for 1 round:

- Sticky Gum: Slowed.
- Smelly Gas: Poisoned.

Crash the perfect wedding in this whimsical fae-inspired adventure for LEVEL 6 heroes!

What’s Going On?

The charming village of Hopkirk rejoiced when their very own Merrin and Drayna were betrothed. When Drayna’s extended Fae family arrived, the locals gladly embraced their promise of “the perfect wedding!”

At first, it was delightful. Music filled the streets, tables overflowed with food, and laughter rang day and night. But days became weeks, and the celebration didn’t end. Sleep was scorned, fields went untended, children wandered in a daze of sweets and song.

The in-laws have co-opted the wedding with vows of their own – a ritual to summon their patron, the Emerald Bride. Should she be called, she will bind the mortal realm into her dominion: an endless festival where every moment is dance and delight... until joy burns to frenzy, bodies collapse from exhaustion, and reality frays beneath unceasing merriment.

Now, with the happy couple missing, and the villagers wilting beneath the suffocating cheer of their Fey guests, one thing is clear: someone HAS to stop this wedding.

Treasures

- Dancer’s Rose. While Dying, you may make DEX save (instead of STR) to act without taking a Wound. 1 petal falls off per use. Starts with d10 petals.
- Champion’s Stein. (1/safe rest) drink out of it and make a STR save (with disadvantage) gain temp HP equal to the result.
- Compelling Bouquet. When thrown, falls apart but stuns a target, overcome with aimless affection.
- Green Lance. 1/Safe Rest, you may brandish the tiny weapon. Any nearby small animals will rise, chivalrous, to the wielder’s aid. They perform the Help action each turn until the wielder fails a roll, then bail.

- Emerald Heel. Smash to release the Bride’s lingering essence, provoking all nearby to dance, sing, celebrate, for a short time.
- Odd Chimes. Shake to make any nearby instrument play itself perfectly.

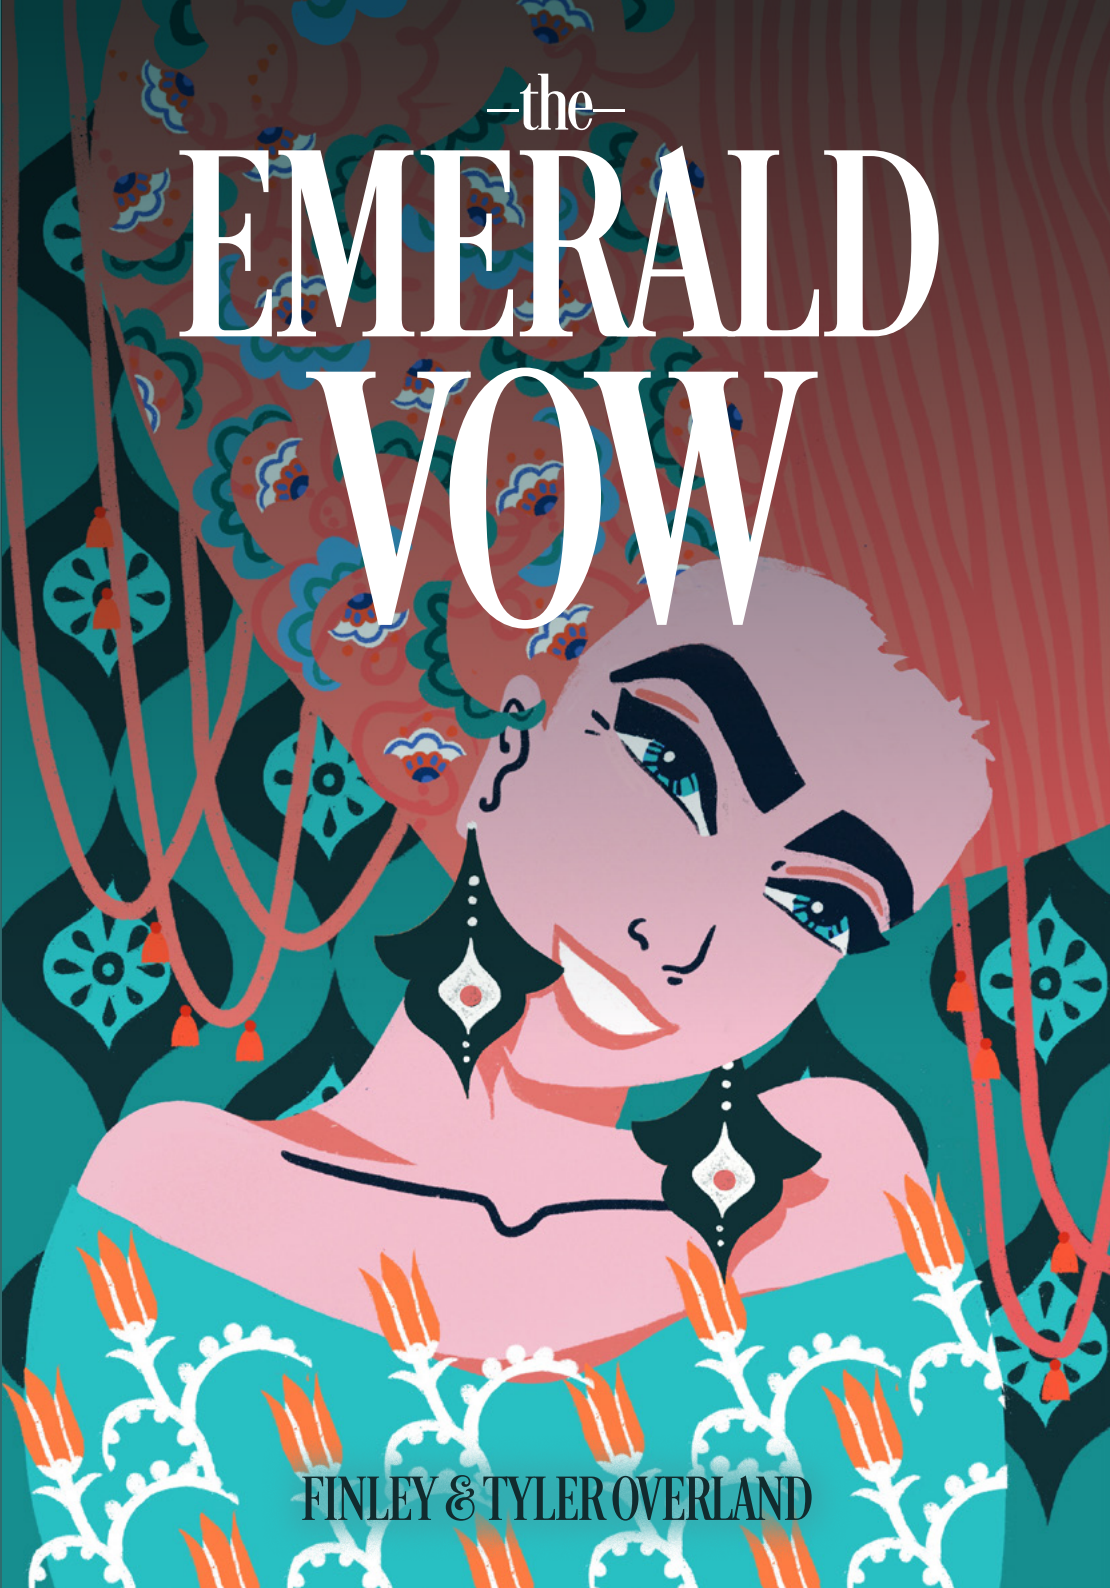

Quest Hooks

1. Odd Reward. After their last adventure, alongside payment, the heroes were given an unopened Wedding Invitation.
2. Dried Up. Hopkirk’s exports have ceased. The heroes’ favorite inn is low on food & drink–The owner requests aid in tracing missed deliveries, promising to name a dish after them on their return.
3. Random Delivery. A raven flies overhead and drops a Wedding Invitation into the hands of one of the heroes.

Copyright © 2025 Nimble Co.
www.nimbleRPG.com
Written by: Finley Overland, Tyler Overland, & Evan Diaz
Art: Goce Ilievski, Qatlas, Evan Diaz
Design: Evan Diaz

–the–
EMERALD
VOW

FINLEY & TYLER OVERLAND

Adventure Locations

Green Street. Maypoles and flowers surround an outdoor banquet - People dance, laugh and feast endlessly.

- Various attendees (Fey in-laws; tall, graceful) conduct the excitable crowd - "To the Happy Couple, Drayna and Merrin!" Zealous dancers, happy servers with overflowing platters. "Please, help yourselves!"
- A boisterous, rotund attendee (a fey In-law) calls out for challengers: "Who can out-eat me?" Pies and meat pile up before him. Best of 3 Strength Check against his roll (+5, a Dwarf can reroll 1 failure). Happy villagers also participate, but fail. On success: gifted a Challenger's Stein. On failure, poisoned for 1 hour.
- A lithe attendee (a fey in-law) likewise invites a hero: "Who can out-dance me?" She twirls endlessly. Vest of 3 DEX check against her roll (+7, a Zephyr can reroll 1 failure). On success: gifted a Dancer's Rose. On failure, take 1d10 damage as you twirl into a stack of glasses. Villagers also participate, but fail.
- What's with the guests? They're TOO happy. Tired smiles, bloodshot eyes; dirt-caked and blistered feet—their feverous celebration is involuntary. (DC 14 Insight: Not everyone. While some guests are cursed, others are acting. The Innkeeper (Lyra) in particular is carefully watching you and the in-laws who seem to not be from Hopkirk, their unending joy is genuine.

Bewitched Festivities. Any hero who dances or partakes in food must make a DC 13 WIL save, or become overtaken with a festive urge to eat, drink, dance (lasts until harmed—a slap will do).

- Lyra, the Innkeeper attempts to catch the hero's eyes: "Don't swallow, don't chew - come with me." She leads the heroes to the Rambling Cat Inn and says "Smile. I'll be right with you..."

Help us! If the entire party becomes bewitched, Lyra dances over and steps on toes to dispel it.

The Rambling Cat. Charming tavern, garlands, holly, roaring fire. The festivities of the street flow in and out.

- Lyra expertly plays hostess, heading behind the bar and pouring drinks to villagers and visitors. She encourages the heroes to mingle for a moment—a great opportunity to gather rumors:
 - "The bride brought this plague on us—Someone needs to find her..."

- "Merrin knew she was half-Fae; he's cursed us all!"
- "His In-Laws hold us hostage; how can we drive them away?"
- "Keep smiling or they'll toss you into their arena!"
- There are people playing cards, people in a corner chatting, and a bard singing a cheerful tune.
- People in the corner are talkative and cheery, toasting 'To The Happy Couple!' Smiles fade as soon as they think the in-laws aren't looking they grumble rumors.
- A group plays cards. DC 12 Examination (or any Cheat): That hand isn't legal! They're playing pretend and whispering rumors.
- A bard, Tafeo, sings a cheerful tune with haunting lyrics. He doesn't know its origin; perhaps he'd dreamt it?

Blood and twine, thistle-and-thyme
Dress of sage and hair of wine
Pale of skin and verdant-eyed
We tremble at the Emerald Bride!

- DC 16 Lore (or any Songweaver): A tale of an obscure Fae deity, linked to endless revelry. Her entering the mundane world would be disastrous.
- After mingling. Lyra finds the heroes and takes them down to the Cellar, behind the bar "Come, quietly..."

The Cellar. Iron horseshoe hung, salt at the threshold. Lyra: "Mind the charms, keeps them from snooping."

- Stark contrast. Dark, quiet. Shoe piles, worn out from waltzes, gather in the corners. Exhausted patrons talk openly, taking small bites of rations. A woman is coached in dancing, but so tired she can't stand upright.
- Lyra explains that Drayna's extended family are Fae from the Wilscape, and have twisted the village into a festive prison. Dissenters are snatched up by the in-laws and taken away to the Manor or the Arena. It's been weeks since they've seen either bride or groom.
- Lyra begs the heroes to get to the Manor, free the dissenters, and end whatever is happening quickly—they're running out of supplies that aren't bewitched.
- The groom's mother is among the crowd. She pleads her son's innocence: "He must be enchanted by Drayna." (false). She begs for his freedom. She carries a portrait of the betrothed. DC 10 Insight: Drayna has amber skin and brown eyes, not the Emerald Bride of Tafeo's lyrics!
- Lyra shows the party a back exit onto the Old Street.

Old Street. Transformed into a fancy garden party.

- Odd fae guests celebrate in gaudy attire surrounded by foliage and flowers. Tiny Pixies swim in ornate goblets, gossiping about a 'tournament' and Gremlins swap stories of mischief and mayhem over cups of honey, excited for an upcoming 'age of revelry'!
- "Ah, the staff have arrived!" Heroes are each dragged into a task (Each must roll 1d6).
 1. Braid my hair, won't you? (a mane of snakes).
 2. She isn't speaking to me! (She is imaginary).
 3. Play me a tune! (A lute without strings).
 4. Feed my pet! (A picky Wocklet—baby jabberwocky).
 5. This Bogey took my seat! (8 ft. tall hairy monster, hunched in a too small chair)
 6. Pour me a cup of tea! (The teapot is comically large and inconceivably heavy).

There are no set solutions! Reward heroes' creativity in fulfilling each task. Use skill checks, abilities, or simply allow them to say what they'd do. If a resounding success, reward them with fae money the Compelling Bouquet.

Poor performance. If they do poorly they suffer minor damage as appropriate (2d4 – 2d12). They could be pranked by a flock of pixies, bitten, or take psychic damage out of embarrassment!!

- An alley to the Arena, where cheers can be heard.
- The path to the Manor is blocked by a maze of prickly brambles. DC 15 Naturecraft (or Might) check allows a hero to navigate (or force through) the thicket. For each attempt, heroes take 20 damage minus their result. On failure, they end up back where they started.

The Arena. A showfor the amusement of onlookers.

- Fairy riders pig-joust frightened villagers who are running around, lances narrowly missing (much to the amusement of the spectators). Upon seeing the heroes, villagers yell for help (Heroes may take their place and fight 1 Faerie/hero and 1 Faerie Merrymaker/hero).
- (Whoever has the highest Insight score realizes that this is more entertainment than warfare. Heroes who go for silly antics are rewarded with cheers from the crowd (+1d20 damage 1/round), heroes who are boring are punished with jeers (disadvantage on all rolls).
- If rescued, among the grateful villagers is Tarwin, a local Ranger. He bemoans that his step-sister was taken to Hopkirk's Manor. If the party will rescue her, he agrees to lead them through the Bramble Maze safely.

- A chest, for the victorious, contains a tiny Green Lance.

Manor's Foyer. Autumn foliage. Many birdcages, stacks of scrolls, filled with drafted wedding vows.

- Birds mimic voices stolen from around Hopkirk, including snippets of the heroes' conversations.
- The "vows" (DC 14 Arcana: Not vows, but a summoning spell—one that should NOT be completed):

"With this ring, we are thine,
Bound in shadow and in shine.
For better, for best, forever we cry,
Step through the veil, O Emerald Bride."

- In a small outside garden, a "too busy to talk" gremlin writes invitations under a bird-filled tree. Finishing one and handing it off to a raven, it takes to the sky.
- Doors to the Manor's Kitchen, or to the Guestroom.

Manor's Kitchen. A cramped mess of icing and ribbon.

- Fey cooks dash about, attempting to wrangle a violent wedding cake, fleeing as the heroes arrive. 3 Bewitched Utensils (d6 minions)/hero and a Bewitched Cake attack! Nearby, mice lie groggily, swollen with cheese, legs flailing. They lazily cheer the party's victory.

BEWITCHED CAKE

50 (+10/HERO)

- Sweet Allure. (Range 8) DC 14 WIL save. On failure they move toward you.
- Food Fight! 2d8 damage to all adjacent enemies. On damage, Bewitched: You immediately spend one of their actions, ending the effect.

- The mice ask for assistance in acquiring more cheese. In the locked pantry. If the party is nice, the mice warn of the upcoming trap (giving advantage). Otherwise, they say nothing and laugh as it is sprung.
- Pantry door is overgrown with thistles. Disarm with fire or DC 12 Naturecraft check. If touched: DC 12 DEX save for all nearby. On fail: 2d6 damage as thistles stick into skin. Safely remove with a DC 14 Finesse/Examination check; or forcefully, dealing another 2d6 damage.
- In the pantry: Arla, an apprentice baker, was locked here for "spoiling the fun." Thankful, she shares what she's pilfered from the shelves: 1 Healing Potion, and a tray of cookies (1/hero, acts as a Hit Die when eaten). Arla asks to find her father Pampo—locked up nearby for refusing to celebrate, "he'll know how to break them out!"

Manor's Guestroom. Noble quarters fashioned into a Jail. Wall, crowded with a hundred keys.

- Villagers all point and shout about trying different keys begging to be freed. Rolling a 100 on a d100 and the heroes find the right one. A DC 20 Might check can break the lock, or a DC 18 Finesse check can pick it.
- Mr. Pampo (the beloved blacksmith) can instead reveal the correct one if asked (he made it, but is discouraged and sullen). He will reveal his part in the current happenings: was forced to forge the prison bars and runescribed wedding rings with the promise of re-joining his family. He doesn't know their purpose, but they must be important to the Aunt and Uncle's plan.
- He asks after his family, then guides the villagers back to Green Street, eager to arm Lyra's resistance.

Hopkirk Chapel. Wedding ceremony, frozen in time.

- The betrothed couple stand in a circle of runes, frozen in time. Behind the altar, the Fae Aunt & Uncle of the Bride preside over an ongoing ritual—Their patroness: The Emerald Bride, slowly manifests before them.
- The Couple. Remain frozen while wearing their wedding rings. Can be removed as an action. Once free, they spend their turns protecting one another, or Helping the heroes against the In-Laws. "This wedding was meant to be for us; our vows are of revenge!"
- On defeat of In-Law: "Good riddance! - You are not my family, he is/she is!"

Aftermath

- With the ritual ended, the rest of the in-laws are chased out by the emboldened villagers. Animals return to docility, still tangled with ribbons.
- A real (sober, music-less, NO dancing!) ceremony is held; apologies exchanged from all sides.
- Gracious for his reunited family, Pampo offers to melt the wedding rings into a charm, fashioned to their liking. While worn, once per day, avoid any magic that would sway your mind, and know it's source.
- Lyra clears a room in the Rambling Cat, should the heroes ever need it.

